ANNOTATION (GRADUATE'S PROFILE)

The main aim of the individually conducted doctoral study programme of Visual Communication directed according to each doctoral student's orientation and profile is development of their creative potential in line with deepening of analytical skills and specialized knowledge in the field with an emphasis on contemporary design, graphic design, curatorial studies and visual arts. This conception logically takes up and essentially extends the complex education obtained during the Master's programme of study, and at the same time it emphasizes interdisciplinary and interbranch overlaps, especially in connection with development of new strategies and forms of both artistic and designer work, as well as current and dynamically developing technologies. This happens in compliance with the current all-society needs and also with respect to compatibility and competitive advantage of our doctoral students versus graduates from foreign art colleges, and with an emphasis on requirements for their future involvement in diverse systems of creative artistic research and art education.

A graduate from the Visual Communication doctoral programme is profiled as an independent artist / designer / curator / academic in the fields of visual art, photography and current forms of digital media, graphic design, design and curatorship. In their professional specialization an ability of a theoretical reflection blends together with creative qualifications and activities. As a creative and erudite expert, researcher, and developer, they will find their place in crucial positions of government, public and private spheres (publishers, photographic and picture agencies, graphic studios, specialized graphic workshops, wide range of media, design development centres, digital media, design studios, museums, galleries, and other professional institutions), and also as teachers at art colleges. The graduate is capable of adequate professional / creative reactions to the accelerating external environment, with an extraordinary empathy for the needs and challenges of the 21st century, especially in the fields of technological development, social responsibility and sustainability. They are open to new impulses, knowing that the need for further education does not end with obtaining the doctoral degree, but is merely transformed into a qualitatively higher and narrower specialization.

The study takes place in full-time and combine forms. The standard duration of study is 4 academic years; maximum length of study 7 years.

The conditions of the FAD UJEP admission procedure for doctoral study for the academic year 2022/2023 were approved by the Subject-Area Board of FAD UJEP on 4 May 2021.

The conditions of the FAD UJEP admission procedure for doctoral study for the academic year 2022/2023 were approved by the Academic Senate of FAD UJEP on 11 May 2021.
