ANOTATION OF THE STUDY PROGRAMME (GRADUATE PROFILE)

The Fine Art post-Bachelor (Master's) programme is designed to prepare authorial personalities capable of influencing the broad field of contemporary visual art through their creations. The programme specifically focuses on photography and intermedia creation, but also allows for possible overlaps with other disciplines.

The course primarily focuses on developing the personalities of students and their ability to use their work to express their creative and civic attitudes towards relevant topics. This, among other things, aims to contribute to the development of visual culture and the visual literacy of contemporary society. Students undergo systematic vocational training that prepares them for a professional career as a freelance artist, while also being immersed in an inspiring environment of a community consisting of students from diverse cultural (and linguistic) backgrounds. The high level of study content is supported by the previous international activities of the team of knowledgeable educators (such as positions as visiting tutors, regular lecturing abroad, organising workshops, attending creative residencies, and prestigious exhibition activities), as well as the involvement of native speakers.

At the same time, students of this programme will become familiar with the principles of polemical-critical thinking and develop the ability to perceive, analyse, and reflect on an artwork as a reference framework for their own creation. The study concept also provides them with basic knowledge of the Czech cultural environment and a broader context of contemporary Central European visual culture, while enabling participation in local cultural activities.

Graduates of the Visual Art programme will be professionally equipped with systematic, structured knowledge and skills that enable them to begin a career as a freelance artist, senior creative agent in advertising and marketing agencies, graphic studios, publishing houses, creative industries, or as an art mediator or lecturer in creative workshops.

A graduate of the Fine Art post-Bachelor (Master's) programme will be ready to become an independently creating artistic personality who reflects current artistic trends in their work, while also considering the development patterns of the national scene in their country of origin, enriched by experiences gained in the Czech environment. They will be capable of engaging in open intercultural dialogue and will be prepared to respond to serious social issues through their work. Building on their previous education, graduates will further develop skills acquired during their bachelor's degree (admission to the Master's programme requires a certificate of recognition of their foreign diploma in the Czech Republic - so-called nostrification - or nostrification with an apostille), both in digital technologies and intermedia overlaps, as well as in classical media such as graphic design, allowing for a wide range of multigenre creation. Graduates will be able to anticipate the constantly evolving technologies of creation and innovative methods of final presentations. Particular attention will be given to overlaps with photography and intermedia creation (photographic installation, time-based media, and digital art) and the development of technical skills related to these disciplines. The study concept emphasises the student's readiness for programmed (conceptual) artistic activity, relying not only on professional skills and knowledge of the wide range of artistic means and tools from related disciplines but also on the essential need to base their work on prior theoretical study and critical analysis.

Graduates of the Fine Art post-Bachelor (Master's) programme will possess the skills and knowledge required for a career as a freelance artist, photographer, or a specialist in creative disciplines (such as media, TV, film, advertising, creative industries, startups, or nonprofit organisations). They will also be specialists in both government and private institutions, experts capable of creating visual and/or intermedia communication at a level of common comprehensibility, thus contributing to the development of current artistic trends and the visual culture of today's society. Equipped with solid principles of polemical-critical thinking, graduates will also be prepared for a career as an educator in various professional art education systems and levels, or as a lecturer in gallery or museum contexts or nonprofit organisations. Thanks to exceptional practical training and strong theoretical grounding, graduates will be able to adapt the information and knowledge acquired during their studies to the authentic needs of the cultural scenes they decide to engage with. Graduates will also be prepared for further postgraduate studies in the same or similar study programmes, including the Visual Communication doctoral programme at FUD UJEP. The study has so far been recognised without issues in all countries where graduates of the FUD UJEP foreign-language programme are located.

The conditions for the FUD UJEP admission procedure for the academic year 2027/2028 have been approved by the FUD UJEP Academic Senate on 11 May 2026.
